Anti-spam legislation should be only directed to those who use purchased mailing lists. As a Realtor, I expect to grow my business through contacts picked up from my website. My initial e-mail contact with these potential customers could be construed as an unsolicited commercial solicitation. The effect of an ill-formed rule will be, as has the DNC and in some communities Do Not Knock rules, to inhibit the new entry of competitive service providers. I can see such rules being strongly supported by those who wish to keep new competition out of their territory
