Dear Federal Trade Commission,

I have been a constant client and wearer of contact lenses for over 15 years. My eyesight becomes more precious to me as each year passes and I see an eye doctor regularly to make sure that my eyes remain healthy and get the best correction possible.

During this time, I have had the pleasure of doing business with three different optomologists and every one of them made their best effort to insure that I would/could only buy my lenses through them. This is not part of the service I was paying for, and trust me, they certainly made a person pay!

I have been buying my contact lenses on my own for several years now. Because it cost less, I can replace my lenses more often without feeling a financial burden every time I drop a lens into the waste basket. I am sure that this is part of my success for keeping my eyes so healthy.

Every contact lens wearing patient should have this option without the harrassment they receive from their doctors. Please make every effort to get the law passed that would allow these consumers to make the decisions they need to in order to enjoy their vision.

Many thanks,

Leslie Seddon
