My opinion is that instead of raising the cost to the companies that subscribe and purchase the Do Not Call list (dnc), They should get additional monies by going after and fining the companies that don't purchase the list. My guess is that there are as many companies ignoring the dnc as there are that purchase it. This would also be the companies that are non-compliant with many other rules and regulations and in their dealings with the public, the same companies who give the industry a bad name to begin with. Make the non compliant companies pay up or put them out of business, don't penalize the companies currently subscribing to subsidize the others. You also could have charged a nominal sign up fee of $1.00 to register to the dnc to begin with and then you would have more than covered the cost to administer it.
