Dear Commissioners,

I quote from your press release dated May 10, 2000: "In the early 1990's many new retailers, including major consumer electronics stores, started to sell CDs at low prices to gain consumers and market share."

The price war started with electronics stores running ads for $15.98 list CDs ($10.24 cost) at $9.99 and $16.98 list CDs ($10.65 cost) at $10.99 in order to drive traffic into stores to buy VCRs, stereos, computers, televisions, etc. This "loss leader" pricing strategy resulted in thousands of family-owned retail record stores and major music chains going out of business. They could not afford to sell at a price below cost.

The major distributors started Minimum Advertised Price (M.A.P.) policies in 1995 and saved my business, along with the businesses of thousands of other record retail stores. The recent decision to eliminate M.A.P. policies will bring harm to me, my family and the record industry.

Additionally, independent stores are pivotal in breaking new artists, and new artist sales sustain the music industry. The result of predatory pricing would be an industry filled with nothing but a small quantity of popular titles at a handful of mass merchants. The end of M.A.P. policy will stifle the diversity in music artists and severely limit consumer choices.

I urge you to reconsider your decision on M.A.P.

Respectfully,
