

Wed 5/19/2004

I am very glad to hear that PC Pitstop and other companies like it are speaking out against spyware/adware companies. I used to consider myself an amateur with computers but thanks to the damage spyware/adware is causing, I am fast becoming an expert. These days it seems I spend more time fixing my computer than I do actually using it. What gives spyware/adware companies the right to help themselves to our computers? Isn't that breaking and entering? Isn't that against the law? Lets face it, our computers are very much like our houses they contain alot of personal belongings. My message to the spyware/adware companies is this.....YOU ARE NOT INVITED!!!!

Thanks for the opportunity to speak out against the unwanted. Shari, Texas

Shari D Hummel

PRACTICE RANDOM ACTS OF KINDNESS!